Standard

The Accessible Information Standard says that people who have a disability or sensory loss should get information in a way they can access and understand.

It also says that they should get support with communication if they need it.

The Accessible Information Standard tells organisations how to do this.

The Accessible Information Standard says that any organisation that gives NHS care or adult social care has to:

Ask people if they have any communication needs or need to be given information in a certain way.

Make sure everyone's needs are recorded in the same way and that they are easy to understand.

Share the information with other providers of NHS care and adult social care. This should only happen if they are allowed to see it.

Make sure that people get information in a way they can access and understand. They should also get support with communication if they need it.

The Accessible Information Standard also says that patients, service users, carers and parents with a disability or sensory loss should:

Be able to contact organisations and be contacted by organisations in accessible ways. Examples of this are by email, text message or Text Relay.

Get information and communication in a way that they can read and understand, examples of this are braille, easy read and large print.

Get communication support from health care staff if they need it. An example of this is:

a British Sign Language interpreter.

a Deaf blind interpreter

Ask your healthcare worker about The Accessible Information Standard.
