Introduction

We hope this booklet will provide you with information that you will find useful when attending the Newcastle Cognitive and Behavioural Therapies Centre. If you are not sure about anything in this leaflet please ask a member of staff.

What is the Newcastle Cognitive and Behavioural Therapies Centre?

The Newcastle Cognitive and Behavioural Therapies Centre (Newcastle CBT Centre) provides an expert Cognitive Behavioural Therapy (CBT) consultation service to people in the Northern Region of England.

We usually work with people who have struggled to benefit from CBT provided at other locations or have complex needs that may not be met in other services. This is primarily done on a one-to-one basis, but we also offer supplementary group work which may be appropriate for different people at different times in their therapy.

Our CBT is adapted to meet the individual needs of our patients.

What is Cognitive Behaviour Therapy (CBT)?

CBT is a form of psychotherapy (talking therapy) used for a range of emotional problems and psychological disorders. It aims to help you understand how your thinking patterns may be affecting your feelings and your behaviour. You may have begun to give up on things, avoid things or be worrying a lot. The therapy aims to help you understand how you might make changes in these thinking patterns, and therefore help you overcome the distress they are causing you.

Who is it for?

CBT has been shown to be an effective treatment for many anxiety based and mood related problems including:

- depression
- anxiety
- panic
- sleeping difficulties
- trauma
- eating problems
- relationship problems

You and your therapist will work together as a team to understand your difficulties and discover ways of overcoming them. CBT is an active therapy. This means that you will be expected to work on your difficulties outside the therapy sessions. This can involve keeping written records, trying out new methods of coping, doing some reading and so on. This work will be planned with you to make sure that it is relevant to you, your difficulties, and your circumstances.

Along with CBT, the service provides other effective treatments, such as Eye Movement Desensitisation and Reprocessing (EMDR for short). We can provide you with more information about these treatments.

What will happen at the assessment?

As per NHS standards, it is our aim to arrange an assessment appointment within eight to twelve weeks of receiving your referral. At this appointment the therapist will explain more about CBT and will also want to know enough about your problems to decide whether CBT is a suitable way forward.

If you and the therapist decide that CBT is a suitable treatment for your problems, the different treatment options will be discussed with you. It is important to bear in mind that you will have a further wait for treatment after this assessment.

What will happen next?

We will write to you to let you know the outcome of the assessment sessions and will also inform the Doctor (or other health professional) who initially referred you. You are entitled to see a copy of that letter and any further correspondence.

Your therapist will usually discuss the findings from your assessment with other members of the team. If, together, you and your therapist decide cognitive therapy is not the right choice for you at this time, the therapist will write back to the clinician who referred you. You can then discuss further treatment options with that clinician or your GP. Rarely, it happens that patients disagree with the conclusion of the therapy team, particularly if it is that therapy at the CBT Centre is not the best way forward at this time. You are entitled to a detailed explanation of this conclusion if this is the case.

How long will I attend?

An important advantage of CBT is that it is a short-term therapy. If it is decided that CBT could be useful for you, at your first treatment appointment, you and your therapist will agree an initial course of between five and ten sessions. You and your therapist can then review progress and additional sessions can be offered if agreed they would be helpful.

What can I expect when I attend for an appointment?

Each individual session lasts approximately one hour and you will be asked to attend weekly or fortnightly. Some individual and group sessions may be longer.

The therapies we offer are structured and at the start of your therapy we will help you to set practical goals. At the beginning of a session, you will work with your therapist to decide upon an agenda for that session, i.e. what you want to discuss and what kind of outcomes you would like. Your therapist will often help you work out what you will do between sessions once you have reached those outcomes.

What can I expect from my therapist?

- Quality assurance

The Newcastle CBT Centre is a specialist service with expert practitioners in CBT. We routinely monitor and evaluate the efficiency and quality of our services in an effort to achieve excellence in what we do. Therefore, your feedback is important to us. In addition to this, we strive to keep up to date with current research in order to provide evidence-based practice.

In 2011 we looked at outcomes for people who had been through our service. We found that 57% of the people we saw met all their goals for therapy, and that the effect of the package of care they received for their symptoms was roughly equivalent to the effect of medication under clinical trial conditions.

Whilst 43% don't reach all their goals, many will have reached some of their goals. In 2009 and 2010, satisfaction surveys showed that our patients find our staff friendly, pleasant and respectful and the therapists caring, understanding and professional.

- Qualifications and Training of therapists

Our therapists come from a variety of different training backgrounds. All therapists will have at least their professional training (i.e. as a Clinical Psychologist, Psychiatrist, Nurse, etc) as well as a significant degree of postgraduate training in CBT, plus several years of supervised practice and specialist experience in certain areas of mental health practice (e.g. depression, anxiety). They are all eligible for accreditation with the British Association for Behavioural and Cognitive Psychotherapies (BABCP) which regulates the practice of CBT in the UK.

- Confidentiality boundaries

As part of our assessment process, and to help us plan your care, whilst in treatment, we need to gather information. It is sometimes also necessary to share information about you with other people involved in your care and appropriate colleagues within this team. The purpose of this is to ensure that we are able to make the most beneficial decisions about your care. At the point of assessment and again if you begin treatment with us, you will be asked to consent to this. Under normal circumstances we will not share information about you without your consent.

Another way in which your case will at times be discussed is with appropriate colleagues within the team for the purpose of supervision. All of our therapists are supervised. This is to ensure high professional standards are continually being met. Again, we will ask your consent for this.

Any information gathered will be kept in your Health Record (written or computerised). We have a duty to keep information about you private and confidential. As such, your Health Record will be required to be stored safely and securely. Also, we will only seek or share information that will be relevant to your assessment and helpful in planning your care. Where we seek or share information, those colleagues will be bound by the same rules of confidentiality.

- Exception to the Rule

There are certain circumstances when it does become necessary to share information without your consent, in accordance with Trust policy, common law obligations and the Data Protection Act (2018). Where there is a concern that you, a child or young person or other person are at risk of harm we are legally bound to share this with other appropriate professionals and this can be done without your consent. If possible, however, we would strive to discuss this with you first of all. The information shared will be kept to the minimum necessary and will be handled under the terms of the NHS Confidentiality Code of Practice.

- High standards of professional conduct

All our therapists act according to professional codes of conduct. You should be assured that your therapist will always be sensitive, respectful and non-judgemental.

What will be asked of me?

The next section describes how our service operates and what will be required from you during therapy. It is important that you read this carefully so that you are fully informed about what to expect.

- Questionnaires

During the course of your therapy you will be asked to complete a number of short questionnaires. This is important in helping you and your therapist track your progress during the course of therapy. If you are having trouble completing the questionnaires then please discuss this with your therapist.

- Self Help

You will want to do assignments between sessions to help you build upon what you get from the therapy sessions and practice the techniques you learn in therapy. Assignments will vary according to goals for therapy, the agenda items covered and the stage of therapy you are at. CBT involves a certain amount of experimentation and exploration. A variety of ideas and techniques will be explored until an effective one is found which works best for you.

- Recording/Monitoring of Sessions

Recorded sessions (audio or video) are sometimes used by clients and therapists alike as they are a helpful way of re-visiting the many issues that arise during a session. They are sometimes used by your therapist within their supervision to ensure that your therapist's practice is monitored and to ensure our high standards of care.

Audio recordings may sometimes be used for homework tasks. The reasons for this will be explained to you and you will be asked to consent to this. Your consent will be needed for the recording of sessions to be made. As with your Health Record, any recording made will be stored securely in accordance with the Data Protection Act (2018). Also, please be aware that you are entitled to request a copy of these recordings. You may withdraw your consent at any point.

Your treatment is not affected if you do not consent to being recorded.

Policy on attending appointments

If you need to cancel an appointment, you must give at least 24 hours notice where possible. This is so that your therapist can arrange to see another patient in that time, and to allow us to arrange a further appointment for you. Please see contact details at the end of this leaflet.

If you do not inform us of a cancellation after 2 occasions, then you may be discharged from the service and will need to be re-referred (if you wish to continue with CBT).

Interpreters

If you would like an interpreter, this can be arranged prior to your appointment.
